PITTENTURF NOT YET CAPTURED

Local Man Charged with being Implicated in Assault on Hanson Hoar and Taking Money still at Large.

James Pittenturf and "alias John Jones" charged with being implicated in the assault and robbery of Hanson B. Hoar at the stable in the rear of the Globe Hotel on Wednesday evening, are still at large, though officers in the section through which they are believed to be traveling have been notified to arrest them on sight.

It has been learned that Pittenturf, after hiding near the race track west of town Wednesday evening came into town during the night to make arrangements with Susie Cook to get a team to take him and his companion away in the morning. He then returned to his hiding place.

In the morning the Cook girl got the team, as told in these columns yesterday, and drove the men by way of Fairfield to Emmitsburg, that route being considered safer than the direct road. The local authorities hearing of this notified parties in Emmitsburg but Constable Ashbaugh, of that place, was at Pen Mar all day and, though the two men were in the town during the morning no effort was made to arrest them. The Cook woman had returned to Gettysburg after letting the men out of the buggy a short distance from Emmitsburg.

Detective Wilson and Constable Ashbaugh were in communication again Thursday night and descriptions of both fugitives were furnished the Maryl and officer.

The Wednesday night affair with the escape of Pittenturf has caused more interest in Gettysburg than any thing of the sort for many months. The effort to apprehend Pittenturf will be watched with special interest as a thirty year penitentiary sentence awaits him should he be captured and convicted of this last offense.

He has served two penitentiary sentences and the act of 1909 provides "that when a person shall have twice before been convicted, sentenced and imprisoned in a penitentiary for a term of not less than one year, for any crime committed within this state or elsewhere within the limits of the United States, the court shall sentence said person to a maximum of thirty years."

Pittenturf's first penitentiary sentence was imposed at November sessions 1901 when he was given a year for larceny. At April 1905 session he was given three sentences, one of eight years for breaking into a house at night with intent to commit a felony and two years each in two other charges, larceny and receiving stolen goods being included. The two lesser sentences ran concurrent with the eight year term which was later commuted for good behavior.

FELL INTO GULLEY

George F. Slagle, of Oxford township, near Bittinger's Station, had a narrow escape from serious injury Sunday night, when he became confused along the Western Maryland Railroad trestle, about 1-4 mile above Bittinger, and stepped off the approach to the gulley, at that place.

Mr. Slagle had attended services at Valley Chapel and hearing of the wreck above Bittinger Station, that evening, walked down the railroad track, and on his return became confused by the shifting of a freight train. He was walking beside the tracks and not realizing how near he was to the bridge, slipped off and fell to the bottom of the gulley. The accident occurred about 10 o'clock.

Mr. Slagle was conveyed to his home, and Dr. Sheetz, of New Oxford, summoned, who gave necessary treatment. On examination it was found that several ribs had been fractured besides numerous bruises over his body.

Mr. Slagle is recovering rapidly from his injuries and is able to walk about.

ABRAHAM HULL

Abraham Hull, aged 69 years, a resident of Latimore township, died Tuesday suddenly at about 11 p. m. at the home of his son, J. A. Hull, Davidsburg, York county.

Mr. Hull is survived by his wife, three sons, George Hull, Clear Springs; I. F. Hull, Mulberry, and J. A. Hull. One daughter, Miss Rebecca Hull, at home, also survives.

The funeral was held this morning. Services were conducted at the family home at 9 a m. The body was taken to the Latimore meeting house where further services were conducted.

The Rev. Charles Baker, East Berlin, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Group officiated. Interment in the cemetery adjoining the meeting house.

ARRESTED JUDGE FOR SPEEDING

Wilmington Judge Accused of Driving Automobile at Rapid Gait through Streets of Abbottstown. Arrested by York Police.

For speeding his automobile through Abbottstown Edmund R. Cochran, a judge of the municipal court of Wilmington, Delaware, appeared in an unaccustomed role Wednesday when he was arrested in York. It was charged that the judge had exceeded the speed limit in running his automobile through the Adams county borough at the rate of 50 miles an hour. Judge Cochran and party had visited Gettysburg during the day.

A message was sent to York police headquarters there giving the number of Judge Cochran's automobile and ordering his arrest. Motor Cycle Patrolman Linebaugh was detailed to arrest Judge Cochran as he came into the city. The patrolman stationed himself where he was sure the machine would pass and as the judge's automobile came in the information was conveyed to him that he was under arrest and would have to go to police headquarters.

"But I am Judge Cochran, of Wilmington, Delaware," the Delaware magistrate protested.

"And I am the bicycle cop of York," was Linebaugh's rejoinder

Then the judge smiled and went to police headquarters where the charge which had been brought against him was explained.

The judge declared that there was some mistake as his machine was not running more than 18 miles an hour. It was stated that a constable from Abbottstown would arrive at 8 o'clock in the evening and it was left to Richard Cochran, an attorney of York, and cousin of the judge to represent him and provide the necessary bail for a hearing.

Both the mayor and Attorney Cochran were at City Hall awaiting the appearance of the Abbottstown constable, but he had not arrived with the warrant an hour after the time set, and, concluding that he would not appear at all, they went home. The judge by this time is at his home and if a warrant is to be served the constable will have to be sent to Wilmington, Delaware.

DRAWBAUGH QUITS FAMOUS OLD SHOP

Noted Inventor of this Section Leaves Eberly's Mills Workshop where he has Toiled for Many Years. Telephone Inventor.

Daniel Drawbaugh, the "Edison of the Cumberland Valley," by many honored as the real inventor of the telephone, and indisputably the father of a host of other labor lessening devices, is about to abandon his workshop, popularly known as the "Old Curiosity Shop of Eberly's Mills."

Daniel Drawbaugh is an old man, as the age of humanity is reckoned, but he strenuously denies that he intends to retire from active work "It's only that I find the walk from the street car to my work shop too long in bad weather," he explains.

But nobody except Drawbaugh himself will ever know the heartbreak the abandonment of the old shop will cost him. Birthplace of countless ideas, home of a thousand inventions, place where the aged inventor asserts the secrets of the telephone were first revealed to man; sylvan retreat where brain and hands worked quietly, steadily, together for the benefit of mankind through the perfection of new and marvelous mechanical devices; every worn board, every notch in the workbench, every familiar tool must abound in memories for the man who knew them through so many years of hope and despair, of failure and triumph, and is now at last to say to them farewell.

But Drawbaugh is a stoic and he will tell you calmly and with no trace of feeling in his voice that this abandonment of his beloved workshop "is only an incident in a very long and busy life and nothing to be remarked about."

Just a few days ago the old building and three acres of ground surrounding it was purchased by Congressman Marlin E. Olmsted. The machinery finished and inventions and hundreds of tools which the aged inventor used will soon be moved to a new shop at Camp Hill The residents of Milltown will miss the familiar figure of the "wizard" strolling through the settlement either to or from his work.

MILD, GENTLE LAXATIVE FOR WOMEN GIVEN FREE

So many of the ills of women are due to habitual constipation, probably because of their false modesty on the subject, that their attention cannot be too strongly called to the importance of keeping the bowels open. It is always important to do that, regardless of the sex, but it is especially important in women.

From the time the girl begins to menstruate until mentsruation ceases she has always vastly better prospects of coming through healthy if she watches her bowel movements. If you find yourself constipated, with bad breath, pimply complexion, headaches, belching gas and other symptoms of indigestion and constipation, take a small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is woman's favorite laxative. You will find that you can do away with salts, strong cathartics, etc., which are entirely unsuited to woman's requirements.

Mrs. Katherine Haberstroh of McKees Rocks, Pa., and Mrs. A. E. Herrick of Wheeler, Mich., who was almost paralyzed in her stomach and bowels, are now cured by the use of this remedy. A free sample bottle can be obtained by addressing Dr. Caldwell, and after you are convinced of its merits buy it of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle.

For the free sample address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 541 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

AMENDED WOOL BILL PASSED

Democrat-Insurgent Coalition Victor in Senate.

DEFEAT HOUSE MEASURE

New Act Would Reduce Ad Valorem Duty on Raw Wool to 35 Per Cent. Taft May Veto It.

Washington, July 28.—A coalition of Democrats and Republican insurgents in the United States senate, working with perfect precision, passed the La Follette substitute to the Underwood wool bill by a vote of 48 to 32.

Every Democrat and every insurgent voted for it. The result is a personal victory for Senator LaFollette, but it is doubtful if the bill will pass in the form it goes from the senate.

Representative Underwood, chairman of the ways and means committee of the house, declared after the passage of the LaFollette compromise that no bill would be acceptable to the house Democrats except the Underwood bill. The LaFollette bill, which was the basis of compromise, carries duties of 35 per cent on cloths and about 35 per cent on carpets.

Democrats Regard Duties as Protective

The house Democrats regard these duties as protective. The Underwood bill carried but 20 per cent on raw wool, with corresponding duties on manufactures of wool. The Democrats sought to get an agreement with Senator LaFollette on a basis of 30 per cent on raw wool, with corresponding duties on products thereof, but it was evident that this measure could not have been passed.

The object of the coalition is to embarrass President Taft. That is the avowed object, as stated by the Democratic caucus. Democrats would probably have refused to support a bill carrying as high duties as the LaFollette bill but for the belief that President Taft would veto it. They have been told that Mr. Taft will sign no bill revising the tariff until the tariff board reports.

The plan is to put the bill up to the president, have him veto it and by so doing still further divide the Republicans.

The Underwood wool bill and its amendments were voted upon in the senate under the unanimous consent agreement. The Underwood bill was defeated by a vote of 36 to 41.

In accordance with the plan of the Democratic-insurgent coalition, Senator LaFollette then moved to reconsider the vote by which the Underwood bill was defeated, and this motion was carried by 49 to 31. Thereupon Senator LaFollette offered the compromise bill of the coalition, which fixes the duties on raw wool at 35 per cent instead of 40 per cent, as in the LaFollete antd other bills, and scaled duties on wool manufactures accordingly.

The voting began after a running debate, in which Senator LaFollette was the chief figure, with a sensational speech.

The first vote taken was on the original LaFollette amendment. This was voted down, 14 to 66, all the affirmative votes coming from the insurgent faction.

Then the Democratic house bill, unamended, was put to a vote and was defeated, 44 to 36, the two Republican factions joining hands for the instant to defeat the Democrats.

Allies Win Reconsideration.

Having obtained a record vote on the Underwood bill, as passed by the house on June 20, by a vote of 221 to 100, the Democrats then supported a motion made by Senator LaFollette to reconsider the vote by which the bill was defeated.

The fact that Senator Martin, the Democratic leader, endorsed the motion for reconsideration and made it clear that an understanding had been reached between Democrats and insurgents, and the motion to reconsider was carried, 49 to 31.

Senator LaFollette then offered the modified substitute of his original amendment as a compromise between the house bill and the original LaFollette plan. Democrats and insurgents had agreed upon this step, and put it through in short order.

EX-SHAH'S FORCES PILLAGE AND SLAY

Massacre on March to the Persian Capital.

Teheran, Persia, July 28. — The Turkoman tribesmen, followers of Mohammed Ali Mirza, the deposed shah, have pillaged Shah Rud, where they made the first halt on the march from Astrabad to the capital. It is said that they massacred men, women and children.

It is understood in Teheran that England asked Russia to join her in representing to the ex-shah that he ought to withdraw from Persia and that Russia refused.

Britain Cannot Intervene.

London, July 28.—Sir Edward Grey, the secretary of foreign affairs, stated in the house of commons that the return to Persia of Mohammed Ali Mirza, the exiled shah, was a most untoward event, but that Great Britain was unable to intervene in North Persia and could not press Russia to intervene when on previous occasions England had urged non-intervention.

SLAY BROKER IN HOTEL

Burglars Murder Aged Man In His Bedroom.

New York, July 28.—William Henry Jackson, a widely known Wall street broker, seventy years of age, was found dead on the floor of his bedroom in a hotel, murdered, apparently by burglars.

The body was covered with bruises. There was a deep wound over the right eye and finger marks on the throat and arms. A washcloth was stuffed in the mouth as a gag.

The dead man's pajamas and the whole room bore evidence of a terrible struggle. In the bathroom of his suite was found a bottle containing traces of chloroform. The pockets of his trousers were turned inside out, but his trunk and bureau drawers had not been touched. All this made the police believe that an attempt had been made to chloroform the man as he slept and that he awoke and made a fight before he was overcome.

Apparently the murderers were frightened away before they had time to rifle the room, unless, as one theory is, that they were not ordinary thieves and entered the room to get some particular paper or article.

Seal Killing Up to Nagel.

Washington, July 28.—Dr. William T. Hornaday, director of the New York City Zoological park, declared before a house investigating committee that Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel was practically responsible for the slaughter of young seals under legal age on the Pribilof Islands. He said no distinction had been made as to sex or age in the seal slaughter.

Feared Tuberculosis; Kills Himself.

Trenton, N. J., July 28. — Nathan Berkman, of the firm of Berkman & Cohan, trunk manufacturers, was found dead in bed. He was shot in the mouth. It was learned that the man was in deadly fear of tuberculosis, and that he had been ill for some time with the disease. It is believed that while in a fit of despondency he put the revolver to his mouth and fired it.

MANY TRUST SUITS PLANNED

Department of Justice Preparing to Enforce Law.

HAS ABOUT 1000 COMPLAINTS

Secret Service Agents Are Now Gathering Evidence Against Alleged Monopolies All Over the Country.

Washington, July 28.—The department of justice is planning immediate prosecution of all trusts or monopolies which do not dissolve or take other steps to obey the Sherman law as it has been interpreted in the Standard Oil, tobacco and powder trust cases.

Attorney General Wickersham is authority for the statement that all such will be brought before the courts as soon as proceedings can be instituted against them.

To make the Sherman law effective the department's anti-trust bureau is now being worked to its capacity. Probably one thousand complaints of existing monopolies, restraints or illegal agreements to control the price of commodities, ranging from feather dusters to telephones, are being investigated.

Secret Agents Busy.

Secret agents of the bureau have been scattered all over the country, and in many instances an investigation of an alleged trust is going on in a dozen states at the same time.

By this practice the government expects to shorten the period of investigation and get prompt action.

One of the promised results of this policy is that the government will have in the courts before the end of the calendar year probably a dozen anti-trust suits in which the department feels assured of success.

In a broad sense the government's anti-trust actions may be divided into two classes—those to which the Sherman law, as interpreted by the supreme court, directly applies, and those where the additional question of control of property by ownership of patents is involved.

The case now pending against the electrical trust and the proceedings against the United Shoe Machinery company present questions regarding patents.

All the anti-trust cases on hand, however, which have not proceeded to the point of action, are being systematically investigated and either are dismissed when no violation of the law is discovered or are turned over to the law department for prosecution.

Tobacco Trust to Obey Law.

New York, July 28.—Steps toward "recreating" the American Tobacco company out of the elements now composing it, in harmony with the decision of the supreme court of the United States, were taken when announcement was made of the formation of protective committees by holders of the 6 per cent bonds, the 4 per cent bonds and the preferred stock. The committee's notice refers to the desire of the American Tobacco company to comply with the order of the supreme court and urges united action on the part of the bondholders.

STEAMER RUNS ON ROCKS

185 Passengers on Stranded Empress of China Rescued.

Tokio, July 28.—The steamer Empress of China, of the Canadian Pacific railway line, stranded on a submerged rock off Nojima Saki light while attempting to round the southern point of Awa peninsula, inbound to Yokahoma. The 185 passengers were rescued.

The accident occurred near the scene of the wreck of the Great Northern steamship Dakota in the spring of 1907. Submerged rocks extend about a mile from the coast, which is swept by dangerous currents.

The Empress of China sailed from Vancouver, B. C., on July 12, and was making for Tokio en route to Yokohama, forty miles to the west and north.

As soon as word of the accident was received in Tokio, Vice Admiral Saito, the minister of marine, dispatched the cruisers Aso and Soya, of the Japanese training squadron, to the assistance of the distressed steamer.

The cruisers took off the mails and baggage of the Empress and aided in taking the passengers to the mainland. The passengers temporarily were housed in temples and a school building and later proceeded by train to Tokio.

The steamer's bottom was badly damaged, and if the craft is saved it will take three months' time to repair the vessel.

Young Aviator Who Broke American Endurance Record.

AVIATOR BREAKS ENDURANCE RECORD

Johnstone Remains Aloft 4 Hours, 1 Min., 5 3-4 Sec.

Mineola, N. Y., July 28. — St. Croix Johnstone, the Chicago aviator, broke the American endurance records for monoplanes and biplanes, when he remained in the air for four hours, one minute and five and three-quarter seconds, circling the aviation course of about five miles thirty-nine times.

Johnstone was compelled to alight before his fifty gallons of gasoline were consumed because of engine trouble, in his all-American made Moisant monoplane.

The previous American record, made at San Francisco on Jan. 20 last, was made by Parmalee, his record being 3 hours, 39 minutes, 49½ seconds.

Counting gasoline, oil and accessories, with his own weight, Johnstone carried about 500 pounds of weight in his flight, which was made at a rate close to sixty miles an hour and about 300 feet above the ground, in a gentle breeze.

Although his engine was skipping badly, Johnstone said he could have remained aloft much longer.

"I had taken some sandwiches up with me," he said, "but when I came to eat them I found them soaked with oil. I was very hungry and came down to get something to eat."

ROTHERMEL'S TIPS BIGGER

Just Because Pennsylvanian Looks Like Vice President.

Washington, July 28. — Vice President Sherman met Senator Bradley, of Kentucky, in the lobby of the White House offices.

"Come down to Kentucky with me for a few days, Mr. Vice President," said Senator Bradley.

"Can't do it—too busy," said the vice president.

"Why don't you send a substitute?" suggested a friend. "I see by the papers that a man out in Iowa who looks like you has been having a lot of trouble lately."

"Well," said Mr. Sherman, "I don't know about that Iowa man, but I know that Representative Rothermel of Pennsylvania—'Dutch' Rothermel, you know—has had a lot of trouble since he came to Washington. Everybody has taken him for the vice president and the porters and waiters in the hotels have spotted him so that he has to give 50 cent tips instead of 10 or 15 cents. It does not work that way with me, because I look like 'Dutch.' I just take them out and buy a glass of beer."

RESTORE GRAY HAIR TO NATURAL COLOR

By Common Garden Sage, a Simple Remedy for Dandruff, Falling, Faded, Gray Hair.

The old idea of using sage for darkening the hair is again coming in vogue. Our grandmothers used to have dark, glossy hair at the age of seventy-five, while our mothers have white hair before they are fifty. Our grandmothers used to make a "sage tea" and apply it to their hair. The tea made their hair soft and glossy, and gradually restored the natural color.

One objection to using such a preparation was the trouble of making it, especially as it had to be made every two or three days, on account of souring quickly. This objection has been overcome, and by asking almost any first-class druggist for Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy the public can get a superior preparation of sage, with the admixture of sulphur, another valuable remedy for hair and scalp troubles. Daily use of this preparation will not only quickly restore the color of the hair, but will also stop the hair from falling out and make it grow.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

Charles Lamb's Grace.

On one occasion when Edmund Clarence Stedman was visiting in New England he was called upon by the head of the house while at dinner to invoke the divine blessing. "I was rather surprised and for half a minute sorely tempted," said Mr. Stedman in relating the incident. "Then I rose to the occasion and asked a grace which I remembered." "But, Mr. Stedman," demanded a young woman of the party eagerly, "to what were you sorely tempted?" "To do as Charles Lamb did under similar circumstances." "And that was?" "He looked about the board and asked in surprise, 'Is there no clergyman present?' The host shook his head. Then Lamb prayed, 'For this and all other mercies, O Lord, make us truly thankful!'"

CHAPTER VIII.

SOME EXTRAORDINARY LETTERS.

THE reader must not forget that Miss Grayman had no knowledge whatever of the real character of this man. She saw that he was a gentleman by birth and training, she enjoyed the charms of his manners and conversation, and, despite the peculiarity of her situation and the shadowy doubts that had flitted into her mind, she felt no distrust of him personally. On the contrary, his reappearance seemed like the return of an intimate friend, and she was glad in her heart to see him once more.

"Oh, Miss Grayman," he exclaimed, approaching with outstretched hand, "you cannot know how I have been annoyed by my enforced absence! If there had been anybody here to receive it I should have sent you a dispatch, but"—

"But my friends—my father?" she interrupted.

"I was about to tell you; but, in fact, I have here something better than any explanation I could make. Look at this and then say whether I have not brought some good news." And, laughing, he held up a letter, which he then put into her hands.

Miss Helen Grayman,
At Bear Lodge.
By the hand of Commodore F. Brown.

So ran the superscription, and Miss Grayman's heart bounded on recognizing her father's handwriting. She tore open the envelope and read:

Pettytown, June 25, 1936.

My Very Dear Daughter—A miserable series of accidents has spoiled the surprise that we had in store for you. It was a foolish piece of business from the start, but I thought that it might give you pleasure, and the Mitchell girls and their brother had their hearts set upon it and gave me no rest until I consented. We intended to meet you at Commodore Brown's lodge; then we were to spend a week fishing and hunting, winding up with a visit to a little Indian village whose inhabitants have long been proteges of Mr. Brown's.

Of course you were astonished to be carried off as you were, and I have been more than astonished at myself for consenting to it, and I should never have done so if I had not known so well the antecedents and character of Frederick Brown. The Mitchells, who are very intimate with him and admire him greatly, have taken it into their heads that you and he ought to be acquainted, and Agnes Mitchell invented what she called "a lovely plan" to bring about the introduction in an "aboriginal manner." I can only say, Helen, that my consent to entrusting you to his charge was wrung from me through my esteem for the young man. We expected, of course, to join you as soon as you arrived at the lodge, but from the start the aero engaged by the Mitchells proved a relatively slow flier, and then came the accident.

Now you will want to know why I send you a letter instead of coming myself. It is a most extraordinary and provoking series of mischances! When we sent for Brown to come to our aid we supposed that the injury could quickly be repaired, instead it turns out that it is irreparable except in a shop, and we shall have to send the aero back by train. And then, to cap the climax, when Brown had turned out half his men to make room for us and had embarked us his aero through some fault of the steersman ran into a tree, and we all had a narrow escape. It turned out that the machine was so crippled that only Brown and his engineer could go in her. You are a hundred and fifty miles away in a wilderness with no roads. We do not know where to send for another aero, and, in truth, I should hardly care to entrust myself in one again, and I am distressed to think that you will have to do so in order to return.

But I have every confidence in Mr. Brown, and he assures me that such an accident never occurred to him before and that he can put his aero into perfect shape again with the machinery which he has at the lodge. The upshot is that I and the Mitchells are going to take the first train we can get for New York. Mr. Brown will bring you back as soon as he can repair his aero.

I am glad to learn that Mrs. Williams is at his lodge. She is a worthy woman reduced in circumstances early in life and formerly housekeeper for the Uphams.

I wish I could be with you for the trout fishing that Frederick tells me about. But this is the last, as it is the first, foolishness of this kind I shall ever engage in. Your very affectionate father,

WILLIAM GRAYMAN.

In reading this letter the poor girl was completely deceived. The resemblance to her sire's writing was so perfect, the manner of addressing her was so exactly in his style, and, moreover, her mental blindness induced by her own romantic fancies was so complete that she suspected no imposition.

So she looked up at Payton after reading the letter with beaming eyes and flushed cheeks and said with genuine feeling:

"I thank you most sincerely, Commodore Brown. My father explains the whole affair, and it was very, very good of you to return so quickly in your disabled aero in order to relieve my anxiety. It is a dreadful disappointment, but—but I am sure the trip has not been without its pleasures for me even if its principal object has been missed."

Payton could hardly contain his delight over the success of his bold ruse. Then he set out to complete his mastery of the situation by entertaining Miss Grayman, cultivating her interest and confidence in himself and keeping her thoughts from dwelling upon her disappointment. Mrs. Williams seized the first opportunity to tell him about the adventure in the woods, and less than an hour after his return Miss Grayman, in gay spirits, accompanied by Susan, embarked with him in the canoe for a visit to the spot where her curiosity and doubts had been excited.

"Mrs. Williams has told me about your fright," he said, "and about her own fright also. The bears are dangerous, and I have ordered Indian John to be on the spot well armed, so if you are still curious about the grave of the big bear we'll go and see it and try to satisfy your curiosity."

Accordingly he took them to the place and showed the spot where the digging had been. It was now carefully covered up with the forest carpet of leaves. This, he explained, had been done in order that wild animals might not dig up the carcass. Then he gave a spirited description of the extraordinary size and ferceness of the (imaginary) bear that had been killed.

"Since we shall be forced to spend a week or ten days here," he said, "I wish you to become acquainted with all the pleasures that the woods afford. I cannot begin to repair the aero for at least three days yet, because, as your father may have mentioned, I had to leave all my men but the engineer at Pettytown, and they must reach us by the forest trails. Being born woodsmen and hunters, they can make the distance in about forty hours of steady tramping, not counting the time required for rest and sleep. As soon as they arrive I shall be very busy directing and aiding them, for I have a shop here specially fitted up to repair my aero. In the meanwhile I can devote all my time to trying to make things pleasant for you."

He certainly did make things pleasant. Never had he been so entertaining, so full of interesting stories, so devoted to the comfort and enjoyment of his guests. They boated, fished, hunted, gathered rare flowers and read or chatted on the veranda.

After three days of this kind of life, into which Miss Grayman entered with all the zest of her romantic and enthusiastic nature, Payton announced that his men had arrived. They showed themselves about the lodge, and presently the aero was removed from its customary place and taken into an inclosure partly roofed over, from which the sounds of hammering now began to be heard. Payton seemed to be very busy here during the daytime, but in the evening he was as attentive and entertaining as ever.

When this had been going on for a couple of days Payton, with great animation, announced that the repairs to the aero had been so successful that he proposed to make a trial trip.

"I want to be sure of her," he said, "because not for worlds would I run the risk of a second accident with you aboard. So I am going to take her out for a trip of considerable length. I shall run over to a town in Maine, and, as I have some pressing affairs relative to my Indians to attend to, I may be gone for a couple of days. In that time I can make sure whether the aero is really in first rate shape. Since this will delay our final departure I thought that perhaps you would like to drop a line to your father, assuring him of your health and contentment. Of course he will be anxious about you, and the letter would be an agreeable surprise. I could post it, and it would be received at least three days before our return to New York."

As Payton anticipated, the girl eagerly accepted the proposal and immediately sat down and wrote to her father as follows:

My Own Dear Papa—I was awfully disappointed over the accident that kept you and the Mitchells away after you had got so near us. It's a dreadful pity that the delightful plan could not be carried out. It was so romantic! But really I have enjoyed my part in it, and I shall enjoy it more since I now know that the whole affair had your approval. I and Susan are in good health and spirits, and Commodore Brown is so entertaining and so attentive, and I am so glad that you like him and that you think that he has great ability. I have never met a young man with more elegant manners or more intelligent, and then he is an American, and you know how I detest those foreign fortune hunters. But I must stop, for Mr. Brown is waiting for me. I send all love and hope to see you soon. Your affectionate daughter,

HELEN.

P. S.—I think that Agnes Mitchell is impertinent, but truly Mr. Brown is very interesting. His father must have been a delightful person. I like such devoted natures. One of the Indians is here.

H. G.

Miss Grayman felt lonesome when Payton had departed with the Chameleon, but she thought of the pleasure her letter would afford to her father. She would have died of mortification and rage if she had known that her messenger was hardly out of sight before he skillfully opened the envelope and read the letter, smiling as he saw how completely it answered his wishes. Then he carefully reclosed and sealed it.

Everything was playing into his hands. To obtain this letter had been the object of his forgery, and he could not himself have written it more to his mind. This was the master card that he had thought of when he had Mr. Grayman on the Chameleon. If he could instil into the father's mind the thought that his daughter was beginning to be deeply interested in the supposed friend who had carried her off he calculated that the fear and anxiety thus awakened would make him willing to come to any terms for her immediate release.

From his spies in Washington he had learned all he needed to know about the Mitchells. As soon as Miss Grayman's letter should be in her father's hands he would be ready for his next stroke.

No pen can suggest the amazement, perplexity, anger and despair of the billionaire when he received Helen's letter bearing the postmark "Charlotte, N. C."

Payton had gone far out of his way to post the letter in order to give a false idea of the direction in which his mysterious lodge lay.

Mr. Grayman had all confidence in his daughter, but he knew her romantic nature, and now she was evidently completely deceived.

He recalled what Payton had told him about Helen's deception concerning his name and character, and with a sinking heart he remembered the fellow's handsome face and fascinating speech and bearing. The bare thought of his daughter taking an interest in this unspeakable scoundrel drove him wild.

But the next day came the climax. In opening his mail he found a letter posted at Wheeling, W. Va., which read thus:

Aero Yacht Chameleon, in the Air.

Mr. William Grayman:

Dear Mr. Grayman—Since I parted from you in Central park after our delightful ride together I have made good progress in the esteem of your daughter Helen. It is a great gratification to me that, backed by the powerful approval of her father, I find myself persona grata with the young lady, and I know that I shall grow rapidly in her favor. Indeed, I am become so bold as to entertain hopes the fulfillment of which would give me a place in the world and in society which I could never otherwise have expected to occupy. I am aware that she has written to you, but what she wrote of course I do not know, but I have good reason to believe that if I did know I should have no cause to feel disappointed.

Now, my dear Mr. Grayman, it may occur to you that the only way in which you can arrest the current is by keeping your agreement and arranging for the payment of the ten millions. Only that sum could compensate me for the defeat of hopes so brilliant. I trust that you will turn this matter over in your mind with your customary excellence of judgment. I shall call you up and name a place of meeting where we can quietly complete the transaction and effect the transfer. Very respectfully yours,

ALFONSO PAYTON.

It is best to draw the curtain on Mr. Grayman's sanctum after he had read this letter.

TREE TRUNK CANNON.

Wonderful Wooden Hide Wound Guns of the Antilles.

The mention of wooden guns suggests a company of boy soldiers commanded by a captain who wears a tin sword. The revolutionary soldiers of Cuba, Haiti and the Dominican Republic, however, have from time to time made cannon from trees and applied them to practical purposes. In the Antilles there grows a peculiar tree with a winding grain, so tenacious of fiber that to split it by ordinary means is almost an impossibility.

When wanted for artillery purposes the tree is felled, a section some five feet in length and one foot in diameter is selected and cut, the bark is removed, and uneven places on the surface are dressed down.

The embryo cannon is then placed on rude trusses and a bore burned in it, a process that serves further still to harden the wood. While the bore is being burned green ox hides are cut into long strips by beginning in the center and working toward the outer edge as one would peel an apple.

When all is in readiness one end of this rawhide band, which is about three inches in width, is spiked to the wooden cannon near the breech. A lever or bar is attached to the butt. Two or three negroes grasp the arms of the bar and slowly turn the hollowed log on its supports. The band of green hide is kept under a strain, and in this way the core of the cannon is wound with one of the toughest materials, wire excepted, in the world.

The first layer of hide is tightly wound to the muzzle of the growing gun and back toward the breech again until a number of layers have thus been wound on and the promising piece of artillery has grown several inches in diameter.

It is then placed in a draft of dry, hot air and allowed to harden. When the hardening and curing process is complete the persevering inhabitants have a really serviceable weapon.

One of these homemade wood and rawhide cannon used during the last Cuban insurrection is said to have withstood 104 charges of powder before becoming useless. The projectiles for it were made of scrap iron, broken stone and fire hardened clay balls.—St. Louis Republic.

REAL JAVA COFFEE.

You May Get a Cup Almost Any Place Except In Java.

It seems strange that in the far east, where tea and coffee come from, it is very difficult for the traveler in nearly all places in India, the Straits Settlements and elsewhere in the orient to procure a cup of really good tea or coffee. This, says Sir Frederic S. Isham, the novelist, although seemingly paradoxical, is only on a par with conditions in so many of our little American hamlets and villages where good butter, rich cream and good chickens for the residents are practically nonobtainable, all of them having been "sent to town."

In Calcutta I heard an American in the best hotel there say to the waiter: "If this," indicating the contents of a cup before him, "is tea, bring me coffee. If it is coffee, bring me tea." And the waiter (an Eurasian), who had no sense of humor, took away the drink and phlegmatically brought something else—equally bad, no doubt.

So after India, Burma and the Malay peninsula we waited with bated breath for the coffee of Java. "Java coffee!" The excellence of it was a childhood tradition. The coffee "mother used to make" was compounded of real Java. In Java surely we should find a nectar of the gods. What did we discover? An extract of coffee served in little casters! It would have made the gods ill. Another illusion gone!

Don't go to Java for real Java coffee. You may find it in Ypsilanti, Mich., or Paris, O., but you won't unearth it in Java—not for money.

SAYS WAR CLOUD IS SERIOUS

Asquith Declares Situation in Morocco is Difficult.

EXPECTS PEACEFUL SOLUTION

France Is Prepared to Go to Limits of Conciliation With Germany, But Will Not Grant Territory.

London, July 28.—Premier Asquith made a statement in the house of commons on the subject of Morrocco, which fully bore out the description of the situation as one of real anxiety.

The affair, the premier said, had reached a point at which it was bound to become difficult and harrassing unless a solution was found.

Mr. Asquith said that Great Britain was not a party to the conversations proceeding between France and Germany, but earnestly and sincerely desired to see them result in an arrangement honorable and satisfactory to all parties. He earnestly appealed to the house not to seek to enter into the details of the situation at the present moment.

The premier said that the government had thought it right from the beginning to make it clear that, failing a satisfactory settlement, Great Britain must become an active party to a discussion of the situation.

A too close analysis now of the causes of the present incident might provoke recriminations which the premier said it was desirable to avoid. The question of Morocco bristled with difficulties. The government claimed no predominatnt position there and any statement that they had prejudiced the negotiations between France and Germany was a mischievous invention.

It would, however, have been a grave mistake to let the situation drift until an assertion of British interests might cause surprise and resentment.

France In Conciliatory Mood.

Paris, July 28.—The deadlock between France and Germany continues, but France expects that a way will be found for a peaceful solution.

To this end she is prepared to go to the limits of conciliation, but cannot agree either to evacuate Morocco or hand over huge blocks of African territory merely in return for Germany's reiterated assurance that France will not be bothered in the future in Morocco.

The international peace advocates point out that the real danger of the situation rests in the nation's offending Germany's pride by driving her into a corner, from which she might strike in anger.

The Matin devotes an article to what it styles "The German Bluff," asserting that no one in Germany would think of daring the risk of a struggle against the Triple Entente. The paper adds:

"The Agadir incident demonstrates that Emperor William's efforts to obtain better relations with Great Britain were pure hypocrisy. The real aim was to separate England and France."

The Temps, pointing out that the Germans seem to be astonished at the clearness and vivacity of French opinion, remarks that, as usual, the Germans are incapable of understanding that their proceedings are offensive to France and directly harmful to the end they seek.

"Germany thought that the dispatch of a warship to Agadir was all that was necessary to bring about the arrangement they had in mind," says the Temps. "By a singular error of psychology they are confounded in finding that they have spoiled everything."

SNAKE IN DINNER BASKET

Man Carried Four-Foot Rattler Over a Mile.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., July 28.—Carrying a large rattlesnake for over a mile in a dinner basket before he discovered it, Noah McClusky, of Bear Run, near here, was frightened out of a year's growth when he felt a sudden commotion in the basket and heard the angry whirr of the rattles.

McClusky is a foreman for Albert Lewis, the lumber king, and he was inspecting some lumber tracts. He carried his lunch in a basket, and after eating most of it placed the basket in some underbrush.

When he started for home he swung the basket over his arm. A mile along the road he felt a sudden commotion in the basket dropped it and was surprised to see a large and angry rattlesnake roll out. He killed it after a hard fight. It was four feet long and had six rattles.

MONEY TRUST NEXT TO UNDERGO PROBING

House Committee to Investigate Combination of Banks.

Washington, July 28.—The next big investigation to be undertaken by the house of representatives will be to determine whether there is a great banking combination with power to control credit, exchanges and deposits and cause business depression and panics.

After hearing Representative Lindbergh, of Minnesota, the house rules committee decided to report favorably a resolution at its next meeting.

The investigation will be made either by the monetary commission or the house committee on banking and currency, probably the latter.

Representative Weeks, of Massachusetts, a member of the monetary commission, appeared before the committee on the Lindbergh resolution. While he did not oppose the inquiry, he scoffed at the idea that there was such a thing as a "money trust." At the same time Mr. Weeks thought it might be a good idea to have the monetary commission investigate.

BAILEY QUITS COMMITTEE

Resigns From Privileges and Elections Because of Probing Methods.

Washington, July 28.—Because he does not believe in the senate's method of taking testimony in investigations, Senator Bailey resigned from the committee on privileges and elections.

He made no explanation to the senate, and the resignation was accepted without comment.

To his friends Mr. Bailey said he could not consent to enter upon the work required in the investigation of the charges made against Senator Stephenson.

Georgia Assembly Invites Wilson.

This Cow Knew Finance.

Cow—Oh, but I've a thirst! Wish I belonged to a syndicate instead of a farmer.

Rooster—Why so?

Cow—'Cause they never forget to water the stock.—Judge.

An Absolute Cinch.

It is said that only about thirty days stand between the average city wage earner and starvation. Most farmers could "keep the wolf from the door" quite a bit longer than that.

Dairy Doings.

What do you do when you discover a leak in the milk pail? Stop it, of course. But do you ever think about stopping the leak caused by poor cows? The latter leak is the bigger of the two.

A cow so milked that she does not enjoy the operation will gradually retire from the business of giving milk. Do not milk her in a cold wind, or a hot stable, nor where flies torture her, nor in a muddy barnyard.

A cow will do much better if always cared for and milked by the same person. Cows do not like strangers, so when your visiting friend offers to help milk say, "No," or not quite so much milk as usual will be the result.

Midsummer often brings much suffering to stock because the water supply fails or becomes low. Pains should be taken to provide an ample supply of pure water, not only because it is humane so to do, but for the more selfish reason that the animals will thrive and produce much better.

Buttermilk cheese is a new product obtained by curdling buttermilk with heat, draining the curd and adding salt. Large amounts of buttermilk are wasted every year, says Professor J. L. Sammis of the Wisconsin experimental station. If this were made into buttermilk cheese it would furnish a larger supply of palatable food, equal in food value, pound for pound, to lean beefsteak, and which can be sold profitably at half the price of meat. To make this cheese the buttermilk is curdled by heating to 80 degrees, and left undisturbed for an hour. It is then heated to 130 degrees, and after standing quiet for about an hour the clear whey is drawn off the curd, and the latter is placed on a draining rack, which is covered with cheese cloth. Here it remains half a day or overnight, until as dry as desired, when it is salted with one and one-half pounds of salt per 100 pounds of curd, and is ready for use.

BAD STREETS A MENACE TO LIVES

Question of Improving Them Is Country Wide.

GOOD SIDEWALKS NEEDED.

Two Men Killed Recently In Passaic, N. J., on Account of Ruts on Thoroughfares—Mud and Water Pools Also Harm Community.

The matter of improving the streets and sidewalks is a problem which every town has always with it, like the poor. No city, town or village has such good sidewalks and streets as to be past the point of improving them. In most places whose citizens boast loudly of the excellence of their street conditions it is quite possible to find some thoroughfares which are neglected woefully.

There is a tendency on the part of officials in almost every city or town to improve certain streets as show places, neglecting others. While, of course, the thoroughfares which are used the most should be kept in the best condition, there is no adequate reason why side streets should be totally neglected.

Sometimes a little foresight in the matter of street improvement will save not only property, but human life. Streets which are rutted by wheels after a heavy rain should be surfaced with solid material that will not be subject to ruts by heavy traffic.

Recently two men were killed in Passaic, N. J., on account of the poor condition of the streets. A fireman and a member of the board of education lost their lives when the fire engine was wrecked. The machine was traveling twenty miles an hour when it struck a deep rut. It wabbled and as a rear wheel caved in swung halfway around, crashing into an iron trolley pole.

Recently a Philadelphia jury made the following report about the condition of streets:

"We recommend that immediate steps be taken to repair the streets, especially those most generally used. Their present condition makes traveling in vehicles of all kinds unsafe as well as uncomfortable in addition to casting discredit upon the city."

A Curious Swiss Custom.

In one part of the canton of Ticino, Switzerland, a very quaint marriage ceremony prevails. The bridegroom dresses in his "Sunday best" and, accompanied by as many friends and relatives as he can muster for the fete, goes to claim his bride. Finding the door locked, he demands admittance. The inmates ask him his business, and he solicits the hand of his chosen maiden. If his answer is deemed satisfactory he is successively introduced to a number of matrons and maids, some perhaps deformed and others old and ugly. Then he is presented to some large dolls, all of whom he rejects with scorn amid general merriment. The bridegroom, whose temper is sometimes sorely tried, is then informed that his ladylove is absent and is invited to come in and see for himself. He enters and searches from room to room until he finds her in her bridal dress ready to go to church. Then all his anxiety is at an end, and the nuptials are duly celebrated.

The Man Guessed Right.

In a church at Amsterdam there is a very ancient funeral monument of white marble on which are engraved a pair of slippers of a very singular kind with this inscription, "Effen Nyt," which means "exactly," and the story of this singularity is this: A man who was very rich, but who was a bon vivant, took it into his head that he was to live a certain number of years and no longer. Under the impression of this idea he calculated that if he spent so much a year his estate and his life would expire together. It happened that he was not mistaken in either of his calculations; he died precisely at that time which he had presented to himself in fancy and had then brought his fortune to such a predicament that after the paying of his debts he had nothing left but a pair of slippers. His relations buried him in a creditable manner and had the slippers carved on his tomb with the above laconic advice.—Tales and Anecdotes.

SHE COLLECTED THE ACCOUNT

By MARY D. JENNINGS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When Reinhart was in business he sold a man named Merritt some goods that were never paid for. Reinhart sent a collector after him, and the man came back with a black eye. He sent another man, and he came back with a broken jaw. Reinhart found it impossible to get any more collectors after that, for he felt in honor bound to tell them that Merritt was a fighting man and sent every collector back with some damage instead of the amount due.

One day a young woman came into Reinhart's store and asked him if he had any bad debts to give her for collection. She was pretty, and a good natured smile continually played about her red lips, just like a humming bird flitting near a flower.

Suddenly a bright thought struck Reinhart. He would give this girl Merritt's debt to collect. He told her that there was an amount he would like to get in, but felt bound to inform her of the reception his men collectors had met and to warn her that she would be liable to receive some pretty rough treatment.

"Just the kind of man I like," she said, with the same delightful smile. "I have no use for these mild mannered men—ha, ha! But you don't think he'll really hurt me, do you?"

Reinhart told her that any man who would hurt such a charming young woman would be a brute indeed and assured her that if she received any bodily injury from Merritt he (Reinhart) would have Merritt arrested and see that he was punished.

The amount of the bill was $185.57, with $38.42 for interest. Reinhart told the girl (Miss Anthon she called herself) that he would give her half the amount if she succeeded in collecting it all and 50 per cent of whatever amount she did collect. He made out a fresh bill and gave it to the collector, and she went away smiling.

The next day Miss Anthon went to see Merritt, with the same pleasant smile on her face, and succeeded in getting into his house without his knowing her errand. He received her kindly, but when she sprung the bill on him he told her that if she didn't leave instantly she would be ejected. She replied by sitting down in Merritt's study—he was a literary man—and, removing her hat, let him see that she was going to stay till she chose to go. But she smiled on him that perpetual smile of hers, and the debtor, forgetting his debt, watched it, wondering where it came from. She didn't seem a bit afraid, paying no attention to his threat to have her put out. She rattled on about various things in a simple and childlike way, saying nothing more about the collection. She sat an hour, after which she arose and asked if Merritt would take up the matter of paying Reinhart's account if the interest were remitted. Since there was nothing very definite in this, Merritt said that if the interest were deducted he would surely consider putting the matter in shape for ultimate payment.

He chuckled when he closed the door on the collector and thought what an innocent, guileless girl she was. Surely Reinhart had resorted to a very stupid method of getting his account. But Merritt noticed that the girl had left her smile behind her. He was writing a story at the time of her entrance and attempted to continue it after her departure. It refused to be continued. It seemed to Merritt that his characters were laughing at him. He threw down his pen and, taking up his hat, started out to walk off this indisposition for work that had come upon him.

The next afternoon Miss Anthon called again on Mr. Merritt, and it seemed to the author that a fountain sparkling and making rainbows in the sun had come in with her. She began by saying something pleasant, and ran from that to something else pleasant, and then something else pleasanter still, till it occurred to Merritt that she was like the girl in the fairy story who every time she spoke, dropped a pearl from her lips. She made herself at home as before, and Merritt made no threat of ejectment. When she departed she told him that Reinhart was perfectly willing to throw off the interest from his bill, and she wished to know what Mr. Merritt thought of a compromise of the account at 50 cents on the dollar.

Merritt dismissed her, saying that he thought 50 cents on the dollar quite enough to pay under the circumstances, and Miss Authon took her departure, again leaving her smile behind her. A fortnight passed and she had not called again. Merritt missed her. One day he met her on the street and asked her when she was coming to receive payment for the compromise amount of the Reinhart bill. She told him that Reinhart wanted the full amount of the bill, with the interest.

"Well, come in and talk it over," he said.

The next day Merritt was revived by a call from the collector. It seemed that he had been living at the north pole in December and with her entrance he had been transferred to the land of the never setting sun.

To shorten a long story, Merritt agreed to pay the full amount of the account on installments. Miss Anthon called for the installments, giving a receipt and a smile for each. For the last installment she gave him a kiss and he gave her an engagement ring.

The enormous total of 76,934,675 barrels of cement was the output of mills in this country last year, being an increase of 10,000,000 barrels over the production of the year before.

Records are usually interesting; hence the performance of Jumbo, a frog in charge of the Lincoln park zoo in Chicago, is worth giving. Not long ago tab was kept on the frog, and it was found that in a period of one hour it devoured 266 flies.

A HIGHER AUTHORITY.

Why Sam Failed to Carry Out His Employer's Orders.

The venerable rector of St. Luke's has a saintly and apostolic appearance. He also has decided opinions of his own on most matters and is not averse to expressing them. Recently, unknown to him, the vestry decided to have the next supply of coal for the church put in a different cellar from the one commonly used. When the coal was delivered, the rector, seeing the drayman making what he thought was a mistake in its disposal, interposed and in no uncertain terms bade the darky place the coal in the cellar always used for that purpose.

The senior warden, several days later, was much annoyed to discover that his orders had been disregarded and that the coal was in the same old cellar. With wrath in his eye he complained to the coal dealer. The latter declared that he had carefully explained to the drayman where to put the coal, so to settle the matter the darky was called in.

"Sam, you black rascal," thundered the coal man, "didn't I tell you to put that coal for St. Luke's in the cellar opening on Fourth street?"

"Yassah."

"Mr. Smith tells me you didn't do it. Why can't you carry out my orders?"

The darky grinned sheepishly, hesitated, scratched his head. "Well, boss, you see, I done started to put dat coal wheh you tole me—yassah, I done started—an' ole St. Luke hisself he come out and gimme fits about it."—Harper's Magazine.

TESTING AN OCTOPUS.

The Power of This Repulsive Creature Much Overrated.

There have been made abroad experiments with an octopus, in a specially devised tank of sea water, in order to test the truth of the many stories told of monster cephalopods dragging human victims to the sea bottom, says Harper's Weekly.

In the tank with the octopus there was placed a "dummy" of the same specific gravity as a man, and this was baited with a crab. Attracted by this tempting morsel, the octopus made for the figure, seized it in its powerful arms and tried to drag it under water without success. It then urged its body toward the edge of the tank, and, holding the glass with some of its arms, it dragged its prey beneath the surface and crushed the crab shell with its powerful jaws.

It is believed that these experiments afford proof that the octopus can only drag its victims far below the water near rocks to which it can attach its suckers. There is one spot in the bay of Naples where these creatures attain a large size and now and then a fisherman is reported missing. It is thought that such disappearances are due to the unfortunate man being caught by the leg by a concealed octopus and dragged under water. In the case of such a repulsive and powerful creature as the octopus it is difficult to separate fact from fiction.

Missouri Chief Josephine, the Holstein cow owned by the University of Missouri, concluded a year's milk and butter fat test not long since, but was not able to maintain to the end of the year the pace she set in the first six months. Particularly was there a slump in the last four months. The milk record for the first half year was 17,000 pounds, which exceeded any showing ever made by any other cow. Her milk production for the year was 26,861 pounds, which is 571 pounds below the yield of Colantha IV.'s Johanna. Missouri Chief Josephine's butter fat production for the year was 740.5, equivalent to 870.6 pounds of butter on an 85 per cent basis.
